

Open, Flexible Access for Third Parties

ADP offers Vendor Programming Access for those vendors who require DMS access and whose needs are currently not met by the ADP Third Party Integration program. Vendor Programming Access provides third parties flexible programming-level access to the DMS. The solution includes authentication to ensure that only dealer-approved vendors gain access to their systems.

Vendor Programming Access is one of the Subscriber Access solutions that ADP offers as part of its comprehensive Third Party Access Program.

System Access for Vendors; Security for Dealers

ADP's Vendor Programming Access solution includes the following:

- Creates a national vendor login account for the Third Party and provides an ADP RSA token for secure DMS vendor access. The one token works for all ADP Dealer systems that the Third Party has permission to access.
- Third Party is responsible for logging into each Dealer DMS with their own vendor login and token password. The vendor login provides similar functionality to the old User Programming, but is unique for each vendor to allow dealers to better control their systems.
- Provides to the dealer, upon request, information on who and how often their system is accessed in this manner by each Third Party participating in this program.
- Shuts off access to the DMS when requested by a dealer and disables Third Party code if necessary.

ADP's Third Party Access programs provide benefits to both dealers and Third Parties:

- Provides Third Parties with continued system access for extraction of data, etc.
- Includes unique authentication by vendor that allows dealer to control the vendors that they provide system access to
- Elimination of dealer having to download data to PCs for communication with third parties
- Reduction of dealership issues in dealing with Third-Party "hostile" interfaces
